What makes this project special?

A long run of 32m of fencing was needed to replace an old worn out fence obscured in many places by established planting. The fencing also needed to be stepped as the garden is on a slope and as it formed the boundary to many properties it was very important that there was minimum disruption for everyone involved.

About the installation:

The client wanted to replace an old, worn out fence with something new that would require minimum maintenance for many years to come. Local Network Installer Morgan Boseley recommended using concrete posts and gravel boards, finished off with heavy duty closeboard fence panels from Walford Timber for a smart, contemporary finish backed by a 10 year product guarantee. Stepped when installed for a professional finish down the slope particular attention was paid having cleared away much of the old planting to protecting key shrubs to help blend the new fence in as fast as possible.
